

Prolifers Arrested at Notre Dame During Peaceful Protest

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 1 /Christian Newswire/ -- "On Friday, May 1, during the Board of Trustees and Board of Fellows meeting, five prolife activists pushing strollers containing bloodied baby dolls with Obama bumper stickers were forced to leave Notre Dame. Two of the five were arrested; the others were asked to stop their protest.

"If the murder of one class of citizens were not legal in our country, then our fight would be unnecessary. However, the mass murder of the unborn is sanctioned by our legal system, with the full encouragement and support of the President and the silence of the American people," one of the activists explained.

"Notre Dame cares more about its reputation than being true to its Catholic identity," said Randall Terry. "If a man said he was going to kill your child, or pay to have it killed, would you politely ask him not to? These are real human beings that are aborted every day. Our strollers are intended to yell, 'PLEASE STOP.'"

More anti-Obama demonstrations are planned for tomorrow and the following days leading up to the May 17 Commencement. Catholics and prolife people across the country are working to prevent Obama from speaking there.
