

Explicit School Reading List Compiled Under Watch of President Obama's "Safe Schools Czar" Kevin Jennings

As we reported last week, we are monitoring the Kevin Jennings controversy, and will continue to report back to you as more information becomes available and new developments in the story are unearthed.

Here's the recap for those of you who have not followed our reporting on this story: Prior to his appointment as "Safe Schools Czar" by President Obama, Kevin Jennings was the founder and Executive Director of GLSEN, the Gay, Lesbian, Straight Education Network. Under Jennings' watch, the organization compiled a recommended reading list that includes sexually explicit and pornographic materials for children in grades 7-12. Now, GLSEN is attempting to have school districts adopt the reading list.

The blog post that contains more information about Kevin Jennings and the sexually-charged recommended reading list can be found online here: <http://gatewaypundit.firstthings.com/>.

Warning: the material in this post is explicit, and not for everyone.

CRI is urging parents to contact their school districts and the California Board of Education to demand that the books on this reading list stay out of California schools. We encourage you to visit www.stopjennings.org to learn more about President Obama's appointee to the Department of Education.
